Joy! Oh Joy! Beefsteak Drops Several Cents

Price Of Valley Alfalfa Still Remains Steady

The most notable change in the price list of foods for man this week is a reduction in the price of steaks. Loin steaks, which have been selling all the summer for 20 cents per pound, can now be had for 17 1/2 cents and choice T-bone steaks, which formerly sold at 22 cents retail, are now selling at 20 cents. That is for beefsteaks. With pork it is different, a rising tendency being evident. Chops have retailed during the summer at 15 to 20 cents. The minimum price is now 20 and the choice chops are 22 cents. Butchers pay 17 1/2 cents for their chop pieces, so their profit is not large. Pork steak is selling for 20 cents, which is about the same as has been charged all the summer. These reductions are probably the forerunner of still further reductions. They seem small in the abstract, but in a large family the reductions will effect a considerable saving.

Vegetables remain about the same as last week, with a few eliminations. The fruit line, quinces, the best of all preserving fruits, and Concord grapes have made their appearance. Valley peaches and the Mesilla valley product, have gone out for the season, but California and Colorado peaches are still to be had, at 35 cents per basket, or $1.25 per box. The California peaches are both the cling and the freestone variety. Following are the local retail quotations on fruits, vegetables, butter, eggs, etc.:

THE AFTERMATH OF THE WELSH CHECK
Furniture Dealer Arrested in Fort Worth on El Paso Indictment.
Bond in the sum of $1000 has been given in Fort Worth by A. M. McElwain for his appearance before Judge J. R. Harper in the 24th district court of El Paso county to answer to the charge of offering a bribe to an officer. The bond was given as a result of an indictment returned in El Paso county by the grand jury.

The case is the follow-up of the receipt of a check for $26 in favor of Henry Welsh, which came in an envelope addressed to E. B. Welch & Co. after the school board had purchased some school desks from the company. McElwain represented, Welsh was at that time a member of the board of school trustees. The letter stated that the matter had been overlooked and apologies were asked for the delay in sending the check. The McElwain company, underlined E. B. Welch & Co., for the school furniture contract.

The check was presented to the grand jury by Henry Welsh and the indictment against McElwain resulted.

FANTASIA DEL CONCERTO.
By Randolph Lloyd.
Prelude:
Mary had a little lamb—
It bleated—so did she—
And so did every other kid
'Round Cleveland-Carnegie.

I went down to the plaza
To hear one William tell—
But what he told I can not tell,
Because—Oh, well, well, well!
The little dogs did bark—
The darling, dearie, precious, sweetie,
Love, dickums, doggies, barked—
They barked.
And someone said the Danube
For some strange reason blew—
But what it blew, or why it blew,
I never never never knew—did you?
Because a woman near me tried
To tell the world that cabbage fried,
Her chef d'oeuvre and her pride—
Was what she shined on—Hope she died!
Ahem!—and tried!

Postlude:
If I were but a cannibal!
Or even a polar bear,
I'd stop that gabfest or wear
My teeth off down to my toes!
I—er—declare!
Visions of Paradise.
Vox populi, vox populi,
I wish you wouldn't vex;
I think the city council should
Benignly grant padlocks,
And, then, when concert time came
'round,
We could enjoy the nox.

THE CALISHER OPENING.

Goldenrod and Glorious Fall Millinery Delighted All El Paso Yesterday
Afternoon and Evening.
Glowing lights and goldenrod furnished the setting for the fall millinery opening of the J. Calisher Drygoods company Thursday evening at the temporary quarters of the Calisher company on Stanton street. The Hitter of the carpenter crew which has been remodeling the Welch building for the big Calisher store was obliterated by the banks of flowers and goldenrod which lined the aisle from the main entrance to the second floor where the millinery opening was being held. There, on pedestals and artistically arranged display racks were the creations of Miss Fashion for the fall season of 1910. Pier glasses and draperies in different parts of the big room where the millinery show was being held and all evening the patrons of the Calisher store revelled in the beauty of the autumn styles. Tactful saleswomen glided from place to place, showing the hats and suggesting styles which would be most becoming. The millinery display was in charge of assistant manager Filmore of the J. Calisher company, and Miss Fash, of New York, who is to be in charge of the millinery department of the big department store during the fall and winter seasons. Handsomely gowned, Miss Fash seemed to be everywhere at the same time, suggesting and explaining the latest of her New York ideas to the El Paso women. Gorgeous, of broad brimmed, black evening hats with no more trimming than a cluster of autumn leaves under the brim, white beavers trimmed with delicately tinted plumes, in two colors, fetching opera hats in black and white contrasts with the quaint lace opera cap attached. These were some of the offerings at the fall fashion show. The extreme widow place of late spring and summer seasons was noticeable by its absence. In its place are the smaller plumes, birds of paradise and the delicately colored rose clusters in the Persian shades of pink and white exquisitely blended.

Although exclusive in pattern and style the Calisher hats were so moderate in price that the fact created almost as much comment during the opening as the splendid display. During the evening a Mexican orchestra played soft, Spanish music from behind a bower of goldenrod, and puns were served by daintily dressed attendants. As a criterion of the fall millinery styles the Calisher opening was a complete success.

GOVERNMENT MUNICIPALITIES

that its citizens are tremendously pleased.
Cedar Rapids, Ia., answers the roll call next with a form of government modeled after that of Des Moines. Among the many improvements there is the conversion of an island in Cedar river from an unsightly dumping ground into one of the most beautiful civic centers in the United States. The story of the success of business methods in city government in the more progressive municipalities of the country might be continued for many columns. There is not a single instance of important failure in all the cities where it has been tried.

Newport the Novel City.
It has remained for fashionable Newport to make one of the most interesting experiments of the day in city administration. It has tried to return as nearly as possible to the old fashioned town meetings, in which every citizen took part. It has provided a sort of legislative body which consists of nearly 200 members, and these meet at regular intervals to consider the questions brought up. Any voter or taxpayer of the city may address the council and be allowed to vote. Initiative and referendum, in which any matter may be brought up by petition for action and referred to the people for decision, has been established on all questions pertaining to important taxation. With all its fashionable edifice and its population of 25,000, Newport likes its new departure in city government, and believes it is doing much to aid the cause of good government in the urban communities of the country.

Much Still Undone.
Much has been accomplished by those who would bring about good government for the 20,000,000 city dwellers, there still remains much to do. It is estimated by the superintendent of weights and measures for the state of New York that in New York city alone the people are defrauded of $10,000,000 annually by short weights and small measures. As this falls largely upon the poorer classes it is a heavy burden that cries out for correction. The geological survey of the United States estimates that the annual loss sustained in the cities of the country by the smoke nuisance amounts to $225,000,000. Here again is important work for the men who are planning the welfare of American cities. Bronson Keeler, an expert in the gas business, found that cities using manufactured gas, un-
